Brief Report: The workshop aims to provide participants with a thorough understanding of econometric analysis techniques, specifically focusing on cross-sectional, time series, and panel data analysis. Through hands-on sessions using Stata and EViews software, attendees learn to effectively apply these methods to real-world datasets. The objective is to enhance participants' analytical skills, enabling them to conduct rigorous empirical research and make informed decisions in economics and related disciplines. By the end of the workshop, participants will be equipped with the tools and knowledge necessary to undertake advanced econometric analysis independently, contributing to both academic research and practical applications in various sectors.

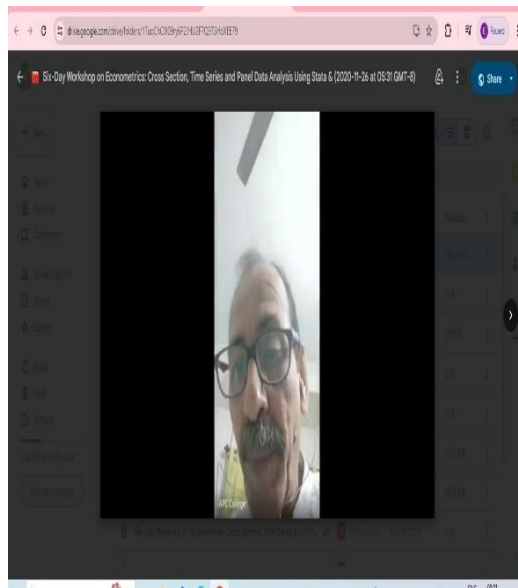

Participants emerged from the workshop equipped with advanced skills in econometric analysis, adeptly applying techniques across cross-sectional, time series, and panel data domains using Stata and EViews. They demonstrated proficiency in conducting robust empirical research, evidenced by their ability to manipulate and analysed real-world datasets effectively. Moreover, attendees gained a deep understanding of theoretical concepts underpinning econometric models, enhancing their capacity to make informed decisions in economic research and related fields.

Benefits of such workshop are as follows:

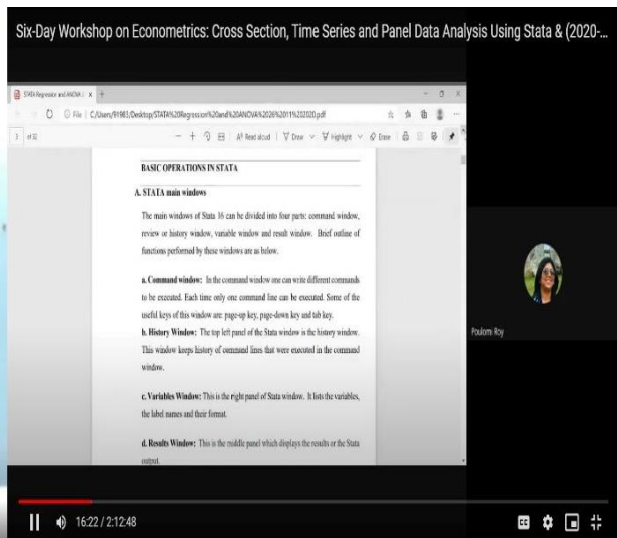

- The workshop fostered a community of practitioner's adept in utilizing sophisticated analytical tools
- The workshop contributed significantly to both academic inquiry and practical applications in diverse sectors.
- It has practical applications in various sectors.
